The rip on the cover is brilliant — a careful and deliberate gesture, done manually to each book, that imparts a sense of spontaneity. The interior meets those high standards with crisp pacing, engaging rhythm, and an effective use of red accents. La déchirure sur la couverture est une idée brillante; un geste manuellement délibéré et prudent qui donne un sentiment de spontanéité. Everything about this book is striking, especially the marbled cloth cover which is a work of art in itself. The pacing of photographs inside is excellent, as is the colourwork, particularly the surprising combinations, such as the pop of bright orange tailbands above the aquamarine of the cover. | Tout est frappant dans ce livre, surtout la couverture en tissu marbré qui est une œuvre d'art en soi. Le rythme des photographies à l'intérieur est excellent, tout comme la couleur, en particulier les combinaisons surprenantes telles les bandes orange vif qui surgissent au-dessus du bleu marine de la couverture.

Denise Williams | Founder, Herbalist

Matter Company

Est. 2000

Given today's thriving all-natural beauty landscape, it's easy to take for granted our abundance of options. They were certainly far from the norm back in the late 1990s, when Denise Williams began her foray into the magical, healing world of herbal remedies.

The Jamaican-born founder was enrolled in environmental studies at the University of Toronto when a friend living in an off-the-grid community exposed her to the natural powers of plants. "In biology class, I remember being so enchanted with the complexity of the makeup of a flower and how it is life-giving," she says. Inspired, she took a year off to study herbalism and plant therapy alongside a renowned herbalist, before whipping up her own chemical-free salves and first aid ointments in her home kitchen.
