Message from the Governor General

Message du Gouverneur Général

I am delighted to extend greetings to all members of the Alcuin Society on the occasion of the presentation of the 2011 Alcuin Society Awards for Excellence in Book Design in Canada.

I believe that the magic of books is made possible thanks to the imagination, daring and skill of passionate artists devoted to their craft, and Canada is without a doubt an incubator of creative genius. For three decades, a jury upholding the highest standards has been showcasing, here in Canada and elsewhere in the world, the unique vision of our best book designers.

Year after year, this competition adds to the far-reaching influence of Canada's cultural scene, celebrating some of the most beautiful works created in our country. In this way, the Alcuin Society is playing its part in not only disseminating and promoting the very best that this artistic field has to offer, but also enriching our collective heritage.

As patron, I would like to offer my congratulations to the winners of this 30th competition, and to the members of the Society's Board for their outstanding work. Best of luck as you move on to the international book fairs!

Je suis ravi de saluer tous les membres de la Société Alcuin à l'occasion de la remise des Prix pour l'excellence de la conception graphique du livre au Canada de 2011.

À mes yeux, la magie des livres se matérialise grâce à l'imagination, à l'audace et au talent d'artistes passionnés qui se vouent à leur art, et le Canada est sans contredit un incubateur de génie créatif. Depuis trois décennies, un jury adhérant à des normes de sélection élevées dévoile, ici et ailleurs dans le monde, la vision singulière de nos meilleurs dessinateursmaquettistes.

Effectivement, année après année, ce concours contribue au rayonnement de la scène culturelle canadienne révélant pour le plaisir de chacun certaines des plus belles oeuvres créées au pays. Ainsi, la Société Alcuin favorise non seulement la diffusion et la promotion de ce qui se fait de mieux dans ce domaine artistique, mais elle enrichit également notre patrimoine collectif.

En tant que président d'honneur, je tiens à féliciter les lauréates et les lauréats de cette 30e compétition, ainsi que les membres du conseil de la Société pour leur travail exceptionnel. Bonne chance lors des différents salons internationaux!

This year, 2012, marks the 30th annual competition, The Alcuin Society Awards for Excellence in Book Design in Canada. Our Society is grateful to this year's judges for volunteering their time and expertise. They met in Vancouver on March 31st, 2012, at Simon Fraser University, Harbour Centre, and selected 35 winning books out of 252 submitted, from 9 provinces and 104 publishers. Each one, published in Canada in 2011, represents the work of a Canadian designer. As in other years, some of the technical production (printing, etc.) was done outside the country.

Last summer the award-winning books from our 2010 Competition were sent to the Stiftung Buchkunst in Frankfurt am Main, Germany. They participated in the international book design competition in Leipzig. We were delighted to learn that the Stiftung had shortlisted three of the Alcuin submissions. We congratulate Marvin Harder, designer: Relations on Southeastern Hudson Bay by Toby Morantz (Avataq Cultural Institute); Jessica Sullivan & Naomi MacDougall, designers: The Little Hummingbird by Michael Nicoll Yahgulanaas (Douglas & McIntyre); and Emmelyne Pornillos (1218A), assisted by Laurie Castilloux-Bouchard, designers; Liz Broes (Em Dash), jackets; Aurèle Parisien (IPCI-Canada), director of production (Montreal, QC): The Conservation, Restoration and Repair of Stringed Instruments and Their Bows edited by Tom Wilder (IPCI-Canada).

The Alcuin Society thanks everyone who submitted books. Copies of the winning books are donated to the W.A.C. Bennett Library at Simon Fraser University, to support the University's programs at its Canadian Centre for Studies in Publishing; to the E.H. Norman Library in the Canadian Embassy (Tokyo); and to the German Book and Type Museum in Leipzig. They become part of the permanent collections of all three libraries. Special thanks go to publishers of the winning entries, for providing extra copies of their books to the Society for use in its exhibitions throughout the coming year.

The fundamental principle of our judging process is that each book must be considered as a total entity. The judges examine every aspect of each book. Their purpose, and ours, is to encourage the very best in Canadian design, and they feel that giving awards only where they see exceptional merit is the best way to achieve this goal.

Leah Gordon, May, 2012

Cette année, 2012, marque le 30e anniversaire du concours annuel, le Prix de la Société Alcuin pour l'excellence de la conception graphique du livre au Canada. Notre société voudrait exprimer sa gratitude envers les membres du jury de cette année qui nous ont offert leur temps et leur expertise. Ils se sont réunis à Vancouver le 31 mars 2012, à Harbour Centre, à l'université Simon Fraser et ont choisi 35 livres gagnants parmi les 252 livres soumis par 104 maisons d'édition, dans 9 provinces. Chaque livre, publié au Canada en 2011, représente le travail d'un concepteur graphique canadien. Comme dans les années précédentes, certains aspects de la production technique, comme par exemple l'imprimerie, peuvent avoir été réalisés à l'étranger.

L'été dernier les livres gagnants de notre concours de 2010 ont été envoyés à la Foire du livre de Francfort, à Francfort-sur-le-Main en Allemagne. Ils ont été inclus dans le concours international de la conception du livre à Leipzig. Nous avons été ravis d'apprendre que, parmi les livres soumis par la Société Alcuin, la Stiftung en a placé trois sur sa liste des ouvrages sélectionnés. Nous félicitons les personnes suivantes : Marvin Harder, graphiste : Relations on Southeastern Hudson Bay par Toby Morantz (Avataq Cultural Institute); Jessica Sullivan et Naomi MacDougall, graphistes : The Little Hummingbird par Michael Nicoll Yahgulanaas (Douglas & McIntyre) ; et finalement, Emmelyne Pornillos (1218A) et Laurie Castilloux-Bouchard, graphistes, ainsi que Liz Broes (Em Dash), graphiste des jaquettes, Aurèle Parisien (IPCI-Canada), directrice de production (Montréal, QC) : The Conservation, Restoration and Repair of Stringed Instruments and Their Bows, édité par Tom Wilder (IPCI-Canada).

La Société Alcuin remercie tous ceux qui ont soumis des livres. Les exemplaires des livres gagnants sont offerts à la bibliothèque E.H. Norman de l'ambassade du Canada à Tokyo et au Musée allemand du livre et des caractères d'imprimerie à Leipzig, ainsi qu'à la bibliothèque W.A.C. Bennett de l'université Simon Fraser, afin de contribuer au travail des programmes universitaires de son Centre canadien d'études en édition. Ces livres font partie des collections permanentes des trois bibliothèques. Nous remercions tout particulièrement les maisons d'édition des livres gagnants qui nous fournissent des exemplaires supplémentaires destinés à des expositions organisées par la société tout au long de cette année.

Selon le principe fondamental de notre processus d'évaluation, chaque livre doit être jugé dans son entiereté et par conséquent, les membres du jury examinent toutes les composantes du livre. Leur but, ainsi que le nôtre, est d'encourager la meilleure conception graphique au Canada. Ils estiment que le moyen le plus valable d'achever ce but est de ne décerner de prix que lorsqu'ils découvrent des qualités exceptionnelles.

Leah Gordon, mai 2012

One of the judges of this year's competition was Stan Bevington, of Coach House Press in Toronto. This same year, the Society granted him its fifth Robert R. Reid Award and Medal, which is the Society's award for lifetime achievement in the book arts. The essay that follows appears in the book accompanying the medal. The award was presented to him on March 30th, 2012, in Vancouver.

This award is among the most prestigious prizes for printing, design and publishing in Canada. It is named for Robert R. Reid, an authentic pioneer as master printer, prolific publisher, original typographer and pre-eminent designer. He has been a friend in the book as well as a companion of the soul for countless individuals over a span of six decades. Reid is a man who collects widely, shares generously, mentors graciously and who creates with the insatiable mind of Genesis. He came to realize that every word can inspire a world in the great chain of being: spirit to breath, mind to matter, ink to paper. Born with a gift that he cultivated like a diligent gardener, his art came to reflect universal archetypes in the cradle of a dawning page. I have been fortunate to know this immensely talented, eternally curious and sincerely thoughtful man. He inspired me, like so many others, to accept my role in the literary community as a champion of the book arts, patron of its practitioners, advocate of the Alcuin Society and profound admirer of its dedicated members. We are humbled by our calling to serve the arts, this unexpected treasure in the midst of life's often remarkable journey. As recipient of this medal, you are hereby recognized as a member of a rare league of laureates. Your lifetime accomplishments have placed you among the most gifted of those who have excelled in the noble craft of book arts. We are thankful for your labours of love.

Stan Bevington, de Coach House Press à Toronto, a fait partie du jury du concours de cette année, au courant de laquelle la Société lui a décerné le Prix et la Médaille Robert R. Reid qui récompense l'ensemble des réalisations dans le domaine des métiers du livre. Ce prix lui a été présenté le 30 mars 2012 à Vancouver.

Ce prix qui récompense l'impression, le design et l'édition est l'un des plus prestigieux décernés au Canada. Nommé en hommage à Robert R. Reid, véritable pionnier et maître artisan de l'impression, éditeur prolifique, typographe original et concepteur graphique éminent. Grand ami du livre, il a su accompagner l'âme d'un nombre incalculable d'individus au cours de six décennies. Reid est un homme qui collectionne abondamment, partage généreusement, sert gracieusement de mentor et crée avec l'esprit insatiable de la Genèse. Il a su comprendre que chaque mot a le pouvoir de révéler un monde dans la grande chaîne des êtres : l'esprit au souffle, l'inspiration au contenu, l'encre au papier. Grâce au talent acquis par la naissance qu'il a cultivé comme un jardinier diligent, son art est parvenu à représenter des archétypes universels au seuil de chaque nouvelle page. J'ai eu la chance de connaître cet homme sincèrement attentionné, au talent immense et à la curiosité éternelle. Il m'a inspiré, de même que tant d'autres, à accepter mon rôle dans la communauté littéraire comme champion des arts du livre, mécène de ses praticiens, défenseur de la Société Alcuin et ardent admirateur de ses membres dévoués. Nous sommes remplis d'humilité devant notre appel au service des arts, ce trésor inattendu sur le chemin souvent remarquable de la vie. En tant que récipiendaire de cette médaille, vous êtes reconnu(e) par la présente comme membre au sein d'une ligue extraordinaire de lauréats. L'ensemble de vos travaux vous a placé(e) parmi les plus doués d'entre vous dans le noble métier des arts du livre. Nous vous sommes reconnaissants de ces œuvres que vous avez réalisées avec tant d'amour.

Stan Bevington

In 1965, Stan Bevington, a young typesetter, moved from Western Canada to Toronto. He rented an old coach house, installed a vintage printing press, and founded Coach House Press.

When Bevington creates a fine piece of printing he achieves it with measurable quality, cohesiveness, and appropriateness, which, along with his insistence over the years on producing the works of contemporary Canadians, have contributed to the Coach House aesthetic. He continues as “Head Coach” at Coach House Books, happy to be working in an era when the creative process, book design, and printing, have been deeply transformed by new technologies.

Bevington has received many awards for his work over the years. In July 2009 he was appointed to the Order of Canada for his contribution to the field of communications, and in May 2010 he was conferred with a Doctor of Fine Arts (honoris causa) degree from Nova Scotia College of Art + Design (NSCAD). In 2012 the Alcuin Society awarded him the Robert R. Reid Award and Medal for Lifetime Achievement in the Book Arts.

En 1965, Stan Bevington, un jeune typographe, quitte l'ouest du Canada pour s'établir à Toronto. Il loue une vieille remise, y installe une presse d'imprimerie et fonde Coach House Press.

Lorsque Bevington crée une belle impression typographique, il met en évidence une finesse, une cohérence, et une exactitude remarquables qui, lorsqu'on y ajoute la persévérance avec laquelle il a produit le travail de ses contemporains canadiens, ont contribué à l'esthétique de Coach House Press.

Il continue à travailler comme « coach en chef » au sein de Coach House Books, heureux de travailler à une époque où le processus créatif, la conception graphique du livre et l'imprimerie ont été transformés par de nouvelles technologies.

Bevington a reçu de nombreux prix pour son travail au fil des années. En juillet 2009, il a reçu l'Ordre du Canada pour sa contribution dans le domaine de la communication et en mai 2010, il a reçu un doctorat honoris causa en Beaux-Arts de l'université d'art et de design de la Nouvelle-Écosse (NSCAD). En 2012, la Société Alcuin lui a décerné le Prix et la Médaille Robert R. Reid pour l'ensemble de ses réalisations dans le domaine des arts du livre.

Ingrid Paulson

Ingrid Paulson studied graphic design at OCA (now OCAD University), and, for the past fourteen years, has focused her attention on book and magazine design and art direction. After a few years working for corporate and marketing design firms, she switched gears and went inhouse at McClelland & Stewart as a book designer, and subsequently was art director at Raincoast Books from 2001 to 2003. She currently designs on a freelance basis for publishing firms in Canada, the US, and UK, and has been honoured with both the AIGA's 50 Books / 50 Covers award and numerous Alcuin Award citations. She lives in Toronto.

Ingrid Paulson a fait des études de graphisme à L'École d'art et de design de l'Ontario (devenue L'Université de l'École d'art et de design de l'Ontario) et elle s'est consacrée au graphisme et à la direction artistique de livres et de magazines. Après avoir travaillé pendant quelques années pour des entreprises spécialisées en marketing et en design corporatif, elle a changé de direction pour travailler chez McClelland & Stewart comme conceptrice de livres. Par la suite, elle est devenue directrice de Raincoast Books de 2001 à 2003. Actuellement, elle travaille comme graphiste à la pige pour des maisons d'édition au Canada, aux Etats-Unis et en Angleterre. Elle a reçu le prix du concours AIGA 50 Books / 50 Covers et de nombreuses distinctions du concours Alcuin. Elle habite à Toronto.

Bonne Zabolotney

Bonne Zabolotney is the Dean of Design and Dynamic Media at Emily Carr University, Vancouver, BC. Over the past twelve years, she has taught a wide range of courses in the Communication Design program, as well as Art and Design History. Current areas of research and teaching include fairy tales and story-telling, typography, publication design and print ephemera, design culture, material culture, theories of domestic space, and visual vernacular. Bonne has also worked as a communication designer in Vancouver since 1993, working with a wide range of clients, locally and nationally. Her most notable work can be found in the philatelic section of Canada's National Archives, which includes her 1999 stamp design recognizing the formation of the Nunavut territory. Five more of her stamp designs are also in the National Archives. She has also worked with some of the largest arts groups in Vancouver including Vancouver Opera, Vancouver Recital Society, and Vancouver International Jazz Festival.

Bonne holds a Bachelor of Design from Alberta College of Art and Design and a Master of Arts in Liberal Studies from Simon Fraser University.

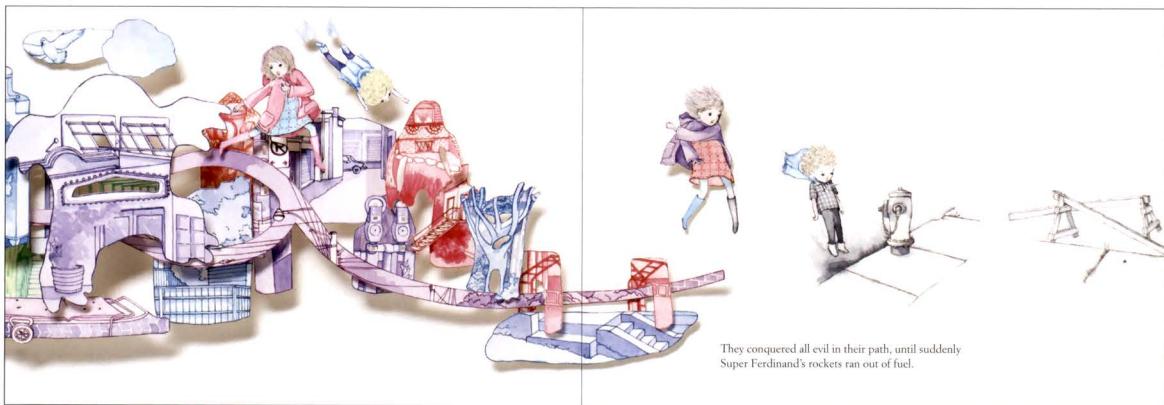

Bonne Zabolotney est doyenne de Design et médias dynamiques à l'université Emily Carr, à Vancouver, en Colombie-Britannique. Au cours des douze dernières années, elle a enseigné une vaste gamme de cours dans le programme de Design de la communication, ainsi que des cours d'histoire de l'art et du design. Son travail actuel de recherche et d'enseignement inclut les contes de fées et la narration, la typographie, le design d'édition et les éphémères imprimés, la culture du design, la culture du matériel, les théories de l'espace domestique et du langage de l'art visuel. Depuis 1993, Bonne a aussi travaillé comme designer de la communication à Vancouver pour une vaste gamme de clients ici et dans le reste du pays. Son œuvre la plus connue se trouve dans la section de philatélie des Archives nationales du Canada, qui inclut le timbre qu'elle a conçu en 1999, à l'occasion de l'établissement du territoire de Nunavut. Les Archives nationales comprennent cinq autres de ses conceptions philatéliques. Elle a aussi travaillé avec quelques-uns des groupes artistiques les plus importants à Vancouver, comme le Vancouver Opera, la Vancouver Recital Society et le Vancouver International Jazz Festival.

Bonne a un baccalauréat de design de l'Alberta College of Art and Design et une maîtrise ès lettres (Liberal Arts) de l'université Simon Fraser.

CHAPTER ONE

The Pragmatist— “Better Than Working for a Living”

THERE IS A tendency to consider those who sell their artwork as “commercial artists,” yet selling art need not mean “selling out.” Doug Cranmer was acutely aware of this. His desire as a professional artist was to ensure that there would be a difference between making art in order to make a living and having the art maker simply to make money. Although Doug undoubtedly played an important role in the development of the Native Northwest Coast art market, many of his contributions to the field have come from his reluctance to bow down to its expectations. Throughout his career, he consistently strove to put his creativity to work rather than let it be controlled by outside forces and expectations. As Doug said to Karen Duffin in a 2010 interview, he treated artmaking as his “outlet for his inventiveness and a job that was ‘better than working for a living.’”

Given that Doug’s everyday name, Kesa’, means “wealth being carved” and that renowned Kwagiul Carver Mungo Martin was his maternal step-grandfather, it would be easy to tell a story in which he was predestined for carving. As a toddler, Doug was sent to live with his grandparents Ahuya’s and Ahuya’s wife, Kesa’, in Alert Bay, a small village on the west coast of Vancouver Island, harvesting seasonal resources from the land and sea. During this time, Doug spoke only Kwak’wala. Around the age of five, Doug lived with his parents and younger siblings at the mouth of the Nimpkish River where his father could hand log in his chiefly territory. When the family was at home in Alert Bay Doug attended St. Michael’s Residential School and later the local Indian Day School.

Some [secondary school children] ask, “What’s it like to do carving?” I have nothing to say other than that it feeds me. As simple as that.

Vancouver Appearing and Not Appearing in Fred Herzog's Photographs

In the winter of 1957 there was something called old Vancouver. One that no one had ever heard of. Inside such a restricted number of places and patterns, the Beaux Arts mode architecture of the city had been reduced to a kind of denyng of private and public spaces, the non-complex still of urban space, the low stereotypos of shop fronts with their monotonous repetition of windows, the lack of heavy automobile traffic, the avuncular and careful streetscape. For many reasons, all began to come apart in the coming years. The new, the modern, the new, the new, the new, renewing, working subordinations, as well as new standards of taste in building types and materials had resulted in the disappearance of the old Vancouver. The old Vancouver type or types had a sad beauty. There were many very comonplace structures of course, but there was also a certain recognizable quality of building type, use of materials, use, shape and order. Part of the reason for this is that these buildings were built in accordance with the times they were put up in, in conformance with them. And since the types were so common and familiar, there was little need or impulse to change them. In the case of the old Vancouver, it was a single-family home of the kind preserved at Mile Hill, a corner grocery store with a few apartments above it, a gas station, a barbershop, a small hotel, a restaurant, a pub, a house like Stalham, had a grace as of appropriateness. Most of that has been swept away. Today, whatever you can see about Vancouver, you cannot say that most of its buildings are gracious and appropriate to their settings. They are vulgar, cheap, ugly and over-inflated. I will not go on to describe the new, with descriptions of what may be called corporate headquaters, massed-out buildings on lots previously being one house, and now containing twenty or more units. This is not to say we all this in the "new-density" aparthys so popular with many wise city rulers. None of these seem to notice the density of people in the city, or the density of buildings. They are caused by the total abdication of leadership by politicians, patrons and professionals in architecture, planning and urbanism, the complete absence of vision.

That's why I don't think we can have a photographer like Fred Herzog now. This is not to say there aren't photographers who do good work. But there is a kind of personal quality, affection those streets, downways, backyards and shop windows. It is in order to have a kind of personal quality, affection, something left to Fred had it, and still has it. As the shop along Powell and Hastings Streets, for the yards of what's now called Granville Street, the old Vancouver, the old Vancouver of Granville Street, and the everything else of that sort, whether he in fact managed to photograph it or not. The only problem is that the old Vancouver is not there any more. It is not there in fact, they are just images of what were in 1957 or 1961, when he captured them perfectly.

What Herzog's photographs of affection are about that cannot elicit that kind of feeling because they do not contain it. It was not put into them when they were created. I'm sure that many of the people who put up the nice but now mostly

"Nol! Nol! Not that! Think of your ..." and she watching her, comprehending, still serene, not even taking care of Clytie, and father, too, soon, who will have something to eat after he comes home because it won't be much longer since they have begun to shoot one another now. No. Not that. Women don't do that for love. I can't even believe that men do. And not now, anyway. Because there wouldn't be any room now, for them to go to, whatever it is, if it is. It would be full already. Gluttony, like a theater, an opera house, if what you expect to find is getting, diversion, entertainment; like a bed already got if what you want to find is a chance to lie still and sleep as sleep and sleep."

Mr Compson moved. Half rising, Quentin took the letter from him and beneath the dim bug-fouled globe opened it carefully, as though the sheet, the desiccated square, were not the paper but the intact ash of its former shape and substance; and meanwhile Mr Compson's voice speaking on while Quentin heard it without listening: 'Now you can see why I said that he loved her. Because there were other letters, many of them, gallant flowery indolent frequent and insouciant by hand over that forty miles between Oxford and Jefferson after that first Christmas - the metropolitan gallan's idle and delicately flattering (and doubtless to him, meaningless) gesture to the bucolic maiden - and that bucolic maiden with that profound and absolutely inexplicable tranquil pale clairvoyance of women against which that metropolitan gallan's foppish posturing was just the jackanapes act of a small boy, receiving the letters without understanding them, not even keeping them, for all their elegant and gallan and tediously contrived turns of form and metaphor, until the next one arrived. But keeping this one which most ha

Quentin hearing without having to listen, he read the faint spiderly script not like something impressed upon the paper by a once-living hand but like a shadow cast upon it which had resolved on the paper the instant before he looked at it and which might fade, vanish, four years and then after almost fifty more, gentle s

ONE often alone, hedged in, heavy at heart, wandering waves, one who stirrs a hoary sea with his hand and walks a wretched way of exile, may yet meet the Measure's mercy,
the grace of God. Fate is implacable.

Said the earthwalker, he had trouble in mind, war carnage, death of his kin.

Each dawn I must recite my cares alone, when there is no one else now to whom I dare disclose the thought of my heavy sorrows. And yes, I know a man is thought more noble when he keeps his spirit-treasure sealed, locks the coffer, whatever he feels;
a weary mind won't stand up to fate,
an agitated spirit won't help anyone.
And so, hoping for praise, men often bind their sadness fast in their breast.

Even so, and wretched with sorrow,
far from homeland and noble kinsman,
I have bound head and mind in chains,
since years ago I covered a goldfriend in the dark of earth and wandered off, bearing a winter sadness over the weft of waves, seeking, homesick, near or far, some patron who knew my people, who might in meadhall offer to comfort
a friendless wanderer, to draw him out, delight him. Sorrow, all know who know, is cruel companion to the one who holds to come to their room. I did that, the first few months after I came here. I'd pull the string and count the seconds, panic building.

What if I'd fallen out of bed? What if I was having a heart attack?

34, 35

What if I'd broken my hip?

42

What if I was dead?

Joyce Sparks.

My name is on the wall outside my room next to a straw hat with a yellow ribbon and a couple of glued-on daisies. The hat reminds me of my sister, Helen, although it isn't hers. The social coordinator had us make our own hats for a tea party last spring. I don't know why someone decided to hang my hat outside the door. I didn't do a nice job of it. I've never been good at crafts. I don't have the patience.

Ruth Schueler is the name on the other side of the door. She's my roommate. She doesn't have a hat next to her name because she wasn't at the home in the spring. Instead, there's a black-and-white photograph beside Ruth's name, taken during her younger years. I hardly recognize her. Frightening how much damage time does to a face. Ruth is eighty-two. I turned eighty-six in July.

Ruth snores something awful. Not at night, usually. But during her daytime naps, she makes the most horrific sounds.

NATURAL ORDER

She'll fall asleep in her wheelchair and her head will flop down like a dead weight. That's when the snoring starts. Some days, it's so loud I can't concentrate on the television, even when the volume is turned up all the way—which it is usually not. I'll have to throw the Yellow Pages at her. (Never at her head, although I've been tempted. Only at her feet.) Then I'll watch her out of the corner of my eye as she tries to sort things out. What was that noise? Where did this Yellow Pages come from?

Last week, I wheeled into the bathroom and found my hair-brush on the back of the toilet tank. This bothered me because I always keep my brush next to the faucet. I wheeled out of the bathroom, carrying my brush like a miniature sword.

"RUTH, DID YOU TOUCH THIS?"

She blinked back at me like I was talking another language.

"IT'S NOT RIGHT!" I said. "YOU CAN'T DO THINGS LIKE THAT!"

I don't know why they can't give me a roommate who can talk. Ruth is the second mute person I've had in the past year. She replaced Margaret, who was also soft in the head. She'd sit in her chair, knuckle deep inside a nostril for most of the day.

"If you find an escape route up there, let me know," I'd say to her. Then Margaret's liver shut down and she turned bronze. She lay in her bed, day after day, while a string of family members I'd never seen before came in and out of our room. They stood at her bedside, joisted fingers over their bellies, looking

MARTHA SCHABAS

Half an hour went by and she still hadn't done any talking. Pins and needles fried the underside of my thighs. Finally she looked at me. The greyness of her eyes had deepened. They were the colour of the sidewalk after a thunderstorm.

"Things might be difficult when I leave, George. You'll have to be extra grown up."

"Sure."

"Just—." She paused, stabbed the rubber toe of her sneaker into the middle of a dusty heart so that a cloud of sand wafted up her ankle. "I know it's difficult when Dad's always—" She cut herself off and looked at the sky. "Just don't let it get to you. They're adults and it's not your problem. And call me if you need anything. Like anything, whenever."

I nodded slowly, trying to put lots of meaning into it because I knew that's what she wanted to see. Isabel generally talked about my mom that way, ran circles around the problem without ever stopping to look it in the face. In her last year of high school, Isabel had stayed with us less and less, and this had distorted her perception of what was happening between my parents. Isabel never saw my mom's tiny provocations, the way she would stare out the window and announce the strangest things out of nowhere—that she missed smoking cigarettes in her old Ford Cortina, that she was curious about neo-punk. One time after dinner, I passed my mom the lasagna dish and she said she'd rather ram her head into the kitchen sink than wash it. Another time, when there was a segment on the radio about the fruit bat, she stepped out into the backyard and started to cry.

VARIOUS POSITIONS

I swiped my finger on the trackpad to wake up the computer screen. I clicked on the Compose button and typed Isabel's e-mail into the address bar. I told her about my letter and asked how things were going at Moldova. I paused over the subject line. Then I brought my fingers back to the keyboard and typed My Audition. I sat back in my chair and looked at the title. I deleted Audition and wrote Carter.

My parents weren't speaking at breakfast the next morning. Non-speaking mornings were identifiable by whether my mom got up to kiss me when I stepped into the kitchen, and she did today, bringing her hand to stroke down the back of my hair, sighing as though there was something sad about the gesture. She had that cool look around her mouth too, a tightness that paralyzed the corners of her lips. She turned away and traced an unnecessarily wide semicircle to retake her place at the table, fiddling with the pearl at her collarbone. My dad sat perpendicular to her, hunched over a newspaper and a bowl of Cheerios. He shovelled the cereal into his mouth, slurping milk through all the tiny holes of oat on his tongue.

"There are English muffins." My mom's eyes were full of feeling. "In the fridge."

I'd planned on telling them about my audition, but a non-speaking morning made it impossible. I should have seen it coming. My dad had worked late every night that week and had been on-call most of the previous weekend. I pulled open the

Lucy's Good Deed

Ah, Sardinia! I shimmy and slither, armed only with Lucy the Tenor Sax, through a sea of trench coats and macs resplendent with liquid droplets from a downpour aboveground. I find a spot on the King's Cross Piccadilly Line Southbound platform, awaiting arrival of the 5:05 Heathrow-bound train. I've fine-tuned the art of guessing exactly where the train will stop at the platform's end; ergo I can predict where each of the train doors will open in relation to the platform. With hundreds of nine-to-fivers standing like nervous penguins along the platform, desperate to get on the 5:05 so they can make it home for dins-dins, standing exactly in position to be the first to fill the vacuum left by the one or two bodies that are epxunged from the sardine tin, aka Tube car, is a definite advantage.

Today is no exception. Here's the train. It's slowing down, pneumatically moaning nnnnnn n n n . . . tttttttt . . . with a final pssss as its wheels come to rest. The train door is right in front of me, almost as though the Train God is picture-framing my figure in his window eye. Except that opposite me in this frame, faces and bodies are crammed against the glass. How similar these contorted faces and bodies seem to those inane, boring

Tropical Night

I feel as if I know that man sitting on a bench in Saint-Pierre Square, the little plaza by the hotel. He seems so absorbed in his reading. His hair has grayed, but he has that familiar way of stroking his cheek with his fingertips. He is the only person I ever saw read poetry in an algebra class. He was drinking in Alcools; a single verse of it soon had me inebriated. I went to his house and stayed until I had read all the poetry books in his father's library. His family read nothing but poetry. Without ever wanting to write any, as his father said proudly, I touch him on the shoulder. He raises his head and without as much as a smile makes room for me next to him. He is still reading Apollinaire.

His father died in prison. They destroyed his library, supposedly because it concealed communist books. The man who hated communists because he suspected them of not liking poetry suffered a blow to the head and died of a cerebral hemorrhage a few days later at the military hospital. My friend wasn't at the house when the regime's henchmen visited. Alcools is the only book that wasn't destroyed that day because he had it, as always, with him—he never weaned himself off Apollinaire. And he never wanted to leave the country despite the appeals of his uncle who lives in Madrid and reads nothing but García Lorca.

He is working as a proofreader for the book pages at Le Nouveliste. Just enough to survive. He could have been a literary critic, but he'll have nothing to do with other people and reads but a single poet ("humble as I am who am nothing worthwhile"). He still lives in the little room he had when I first met him. He closed off the other rooms the day a friend who works at the palace informed him of his father's death. Ever since he's been adding alcohol to poetry. He works at the paper in the morning and spends his afternoons reading on this bench, waiting for nightfall.

Night falls so suddenly in the tropics.

Night black as ink.
Surprised by the darkness all around me
I walk behind the man slowly reciting Apollinaire.

The smell of ilang-ilang uses the darkness to spread over this poor district.

We slip silently between two rows of lamps.
The melodious voices of the women whose silhouettes are sketched upon the market walls.
Their sung stories were my childhood lullaby on summer evenings.

The indolent gait
of a cow
on her evening stroll.
The night becomes a Chagall painting.

Those nubile young girls from the poor parts of town wearing flimsy sandals slip like geishas over the asphalt still warm from the sun on their way to the movie house near the market.
Soon their lovers will meet them.
Young tattooed bandits they kiss all along their way.

22 | KING

Since the publication of Stacey's book, King's diary and voluminous papers have been probed, dissected and analyzed in hundreds of scholarly studies and doctoral dissertations. The specialized work of each—most notably that of Robert MacGregor Davison, Blair Neatby, Jack Granatstein, Norman Hillmer and Charles Stacey—were of enormous assistance to me in completing this biography. And yet almost all of these comprehensive books, articles and theses remain largely inaccessible to the general public, at whom this book is directed. For them, King remains a curious enigma. He is the chubby face on the fifty-dollar bill and the subject of novels, plays and children's books, which have painted him as crazy Willie. He was "the loner," as one recent book for young people by Toronto writer Nate Hendley put it. "Wily Willie a dull leader for exciting times... who preferred the company of his dogs to humans."

Of William Lyon Mackenzie King, his lifelong friend Violet Markham had this to say in her memoirs: "No figure in contemporary history has excited more diverse views, or given rise to such contradictory estimates of character. I sometimes thought his personality might be likened to a set of Chinese boxes which fit so surprisingly into each other, each box different in size and colour and yet making a perfect whole."

And that was only the half of it.

I

His Mantle Has Fallen on Me

I feel that I have a great work to do in this life. I believe that in some sphere I shall rise to be influential and helpful ... I believe it may be a professor of Political Economy, an earnest student of social questions. Or it may be in public life, parliament perhaps ... —DIARY OF WILLIAM LYON MACKENZIE KING, August 27, 1895

IN SEPTEMBER 1947, near the end of his life, William Lyon Mackenzie King paid a final visit to Kitchener, Ontario, where he was born on December 17, 1874. As he toured the grounds of his family's home there, called "Woodside," he was bursting with emotion and sentimental memories. "I was delighted to see in front of the house, there was still the appearance of the old lawn," he recorded that evening in his diary, an entry that runs six pages. "I missed many of the old pine trees... I walked through some of [the long grass] to the spot where, as children, we all mourned the loss and burial of the little dog Fanny. I recalled many of the incidents related to old Bill, our horse; thought of the days we played cricket on the lawn; of sliding down a hill in the winter and of my brother, Max sliding down on one or two occasions in a barrel."

The visit also triggered King's spiritual demons. In an unsettling dream he had the previous night, he saw his deceased parents standing on a platform by the train, "looking very much concerned and frightened," sharing in their son's "distress and mental condition" at the prospect of returning to Woodside. But as with so many other interactions in Mackenzie King's life that caused him needless anxiety, the day-long visit to Kitchener turned out to be quite enjoyable.

MY NAME IS EDEN ROBINSON. My mother is Heiltsuk' from Bella Bella and my father is Haisla from Kitamaat Village, both small reserves on the northwest coast of British Columbia. My maternal grandmother's family was originally from Rivers Inlet. Since both sides of my family are matrilineal, technically, my clan name should have come from my mother's side and I should belong to the Eagle Clan. When I was ten years old, my father's family decided to give me and my sister Beaver Clan names at a Settlement Feast for a chief of the Beaver Clan who had died a year earlier.

When a chief died, his body was embalmed in a Terrace funeral home and then he was brought back to his house where he lay for at least three days, attended around the clock by family members or people hired by his family to keep him safe from harm as he rested in the living room. Community members paid respects by visiting him in his home and at his memorial. After the funeral itself, the Thank You Supper was held for people who had helped out emotionally, financially and organizationally. After a year of planning and preparation, the family announced the date of the Settlement Feast and finally, of the headstone moving. Modern feasts are truncated affairs lasting six hours at the most. Much of the dancing has gone but the important dirges are sung, names are distributed and re-distributed to clan members, and people from the community are gifted according to status and involvement with the family. In general, headstone moving is considered an affair of the immediate family and close friends. Space in the graveyard is tight and imposing yourself on the family's grief is considered the height of rudeness.

You aren't supposed to attend a feast or a potlatch without an Indian name and since we were living in Kitamaat Village, my mother, although annoyed, for the sake of convenience agreed to let us become Beaver Clan. My younger sister and I received our names at this Settlement Feast. Towards the end of the evening, we were told to go and line up with other children receiving names. I mostly remember being embarrassed to be standing in front of everyone and having no idea what I was supposed to do. One of my aunts told me if I wanted to learn more about my name, I should go visit my grandmother, my ma-ma-oo.*

❖ Nameless mountains, nameless creeks: language abhors such vacuums. Once we'd climbed the mountain, and were camped with the pack horses beside the tarn, I could feel the impulse to supply names become active, as though language were suffering a housekeeping crisis. I thought of early explorers and scientists leaving their names—or those of their heroes, friends, wives, mistresses, or pets—attached to the species and landmarks they encountered, how it seems to satisfy some primal urge in a hyperlinguistic species like ours. I suspect that language harbours a desire to be the map in the Borges story that is co-extensive with the world. Once inducted—baptized—into language, the mountain or creek seems to join us in the tissues of discourse that make up so much of human life. It yields a portion of its otherness; it agrees (or so we like to think) to live along with us inside that web of reference which, some would argue, constitutes the real.

That particular linguistic mania is illusory but compelling, especially in seminar rooms. Out there on the mountain, though, I felt a contrary impulse, an impulse beyond simply letting the being of the place

THE KOMAGATA MARU
AT THE GATES OF CANADA

This was on the pivotal decision by Chief Justice Hunter reached hundreds of would-be immigrants stranded at Asian ports. In March 1914, our group met with Gurdit Singh in the Hong Kong "Gurdwara." A compact man in his mid-fifties, Singh was the authority of the rough Sikh folk from the villages of Punjab. A kind man, he had a gentle smile, but his presence and mannerisms, even in the orthodox Sikh style, added a dash of worldly wisdom. Although his roots lay in the village of Sarhali, near Amritsar, Gurdit Singh had been part of the early wave of migrants from Punjab. A quietly devout Sikh, he visited gurdwara whenever he traveled. Serving as a sales agent for a British company, he had attained wealth and prestige as a government contractor whose dealings took him all over Southeast Asia. Government contracts required a knowledge of English, and cutting deals with local businessmen, suppliers and workers meant learning Malay – Gurdit was fluent. He also knew that to succeed he also required a solid knowledge of the English language. Gurdit Singh had learned the importance of British jurisdiction, and he was known to be a frugal man.

In the spring of 1914, Gurdit was at a personal and professional crossroads, haunted by a feeling that he wanted to contribute to the welfare of his compatriots. In his sales pitch to potential passengers to Canada, he wrote:

floor where they were buried under thick layers of sediments. Today these fossil-rich deposits—now compressed into solid sandstone and shale—are buried some 3 miles (5 kilometers) beneath the wheat fields of the northern plains and at lesser depths in other parts of the prairies. But in a few places—like the Judith and Little Rocky mountains and the northern Black Hills—they have been pushed up to the surface, exposing their maritime history to plain view.

When the Cambrian sea finally withdrew and dry land emerged again, the forces of erosion immediately began to tear away at the newly formed rocks. But soon, geologically speaking—after a break of little more than 20 million years—the water rose and slowly spread over the land. This time, even the transcontinental island chain was bathed in the warm, clear seas. Now primitive snails munched on algae and were themselves preyed upon by giant squid-like nautiloids, with shells up to a couple of yards in length. Hundreds of new species of shelled animals evolved, including crinoids, or “sea lilies” (distantly and the familial owners of the poles has always been the deciding factor in any village decision. Two years later, the newly elected chief councillor, Percy Williams, approached Solomon Wilson, a chief from the village of Chaał, for permission to remove a pole from the site, but the village chief replied, "I want to see it stay right there and go back into the ground where it belongs."⁴³ The pole remains standing today, accessible to the Haida people, and to those who visit the site with the permission of the Skidegate Band Council. Percy Williams was on the council that gave permission for the removal of the poles at Ninstints, but Solomon Wilson's comments profoundly affected him, leaving him with mixed feelings about the salvage expedition. On the one hand, he believes in the value of the cultural awareness that may arise through the accessibility of our culture within the museum institution, but on the other hand the reality is that the salvaging of our people's culture and heritage must also be viewed within the context of the colonial, scientific study of the other, the dominant culture's assumption that it is not only their obligation but their right to assume the responsibility of caring for (and promoting the notion of) a dying culture, that within a museum setting, the poles of the Haida nation are transmuted into artifacts, frozen in time, becoming part of a homogenous collection of Indian artifacts, and that having them stored inside a government institution five hundred miles away from Haida Gwaii does little to educate people about contemporary Haida culture—whereas the pole in Chaał remains for our children.⁴⁴

As discussed, native people's need for a saviour has been firmly entrenched and naturalized in Canadian history through various processes. The notion that Reid is not just the resuscitator of Northwest Coast art, but that he has, in Doris Shadbold's words, "opened up for the native people a channel to the respect for their heritage and therefore themselves that they were in danger of losing,"⁴⁵ implies that he was also responsible for the spiritual rebirth of nations of people. Shadbold's remark is vaguely reminiscent of statements from a Report of Conference on Native Indian Affairs, sponsored by the B.C. Indian Arts and Welfare Society, 1948—a society founded, said the then-president, Mrs. A. J. Tally, "to help the Indians help themselves."⁴⁶ In this report, artist Mildred Valley Thornton comments on native children's interest in her portraiture of native people from communities all across Canada: "All the children need is the guidance from others to set this spirit, this enthusiasm alight. To create pride, to kindle self-respect, and to present a whole new creative experience in art is the tinder ready waiting for someone to apply the torch."⁴⁷ In the same report, Miss C. Johnson of the Department

Children | Livres pour enfants

First Prize | Premier Prix: A Few Blocks

The sly use of colour in this book shifts subtly with the narrative of two children exploring a few city blocks near their home. The cut-out style of the illustrations appropriately enhances the story.

Dans ce livre, l'usage astucieux d'un décalage de couleur subtile permet de suivre le récit de deux enfants qui explorent quelques pâtés de maison près de chez eux. Les illustrations, qui reproduisent judicieusement des images découpées en trois dimensions, mettent l'histoire en valeur.

Second Prize | Deuxième Prix: Billy Stuart. 1. Les Zintrépides. 2. Dans l'antre du Minotaure

This energetic and consistent series about the little raccoon “hero”, Billy Stuart, uses onomatopoeia and every fun typeface available to create a book that appeals to children.

Le graphiste de cette série dynamique et harmonieuse sur le petit raton laveur et « héros », Billy Stuart, recourt à des onomatopées et à tous les caractères typographiques amusants à sa disposition pour créer un livre que les enfants trouveront fort attachant.

Third Prize | Troisième Prix: Wellington's Rainy Day

The fluidity of movement in this charming book about Wellington, a basset hound led through the book by his nose, is enhanced by the good hand lettering and the varied placement of images on the pages.

Dans ce charmant livre sur Wellington, un basset que l'on mène par le bout du nez tout au long du livre, la fluidité du mouvement est rehaussée par le bon lettrage à la main et le positionnement varié des images sur la page.

Honourable Mention | Mention honorable: City Numbers

This book contains a good combination of learning numbers in a variety of contexts. With its photos of numbers found in different places in a city, it is interesting to adults as well as to children.

Ce livre contient un bon ensemble de chiffres que les enfants peuvent apprendre dans plusieurs contextes. Grâce à ses photos de chiffres que l'on trouve à différents endroits dans une ville, il est aussi attrayant pour les adultes que pour les enfants.

Limited Editions | Éditions limitées

First prize (tie) | Premier prix (ex aequo): Steichen: Eduard et Voulangis: the Early Modernist Period, 1915-1923

This book is the exemplification of good printing and is the finest example of letterpress of all of this year's entries. The tipped-in illustrations are as beautiful as they are technically perfect.

Ce livre est un modèle de l'imprimerie de qualité supérieure et le plus bel exemple d'impression typographique de toutes les œuvres présentées au concours de cette année. Sur le plan technique, les images collées sont aussi parfaites que ravissantes.

First prize (tie) | Premier prix (ex aequo): Bleu marin: Book of Poetry, ou, Recueil de poésie

The typography in this book is very playful and there is a lovely sense of delicacy, especially with the use of blue-coloured paper. The red and blue inks mirror the book's inspiration, a quote from Pablo Picasso: "Quand je n'ai pas de bleu, je mets du rouge". The way the type lifted into a third dimension is a breakthrough from shaped two-dimensional lettering.

Ce livre, dont la typographie est très enjouée, révèle une sensibilité délicate, surtout grâce à l'usage de papier bleu. Les encres de couleurs rouge et bleue répondent à une citation de Picasso qui a inspiré le livre : « Quand je n'ai pas de bleu, je mets du rouge ». La façon dont le caractère typographique se détache pour atteindre une troisième dimension constitue une avancée par rapport au lettrage à deux dimensions.

First prize (tie) | Premier prix (ex aequo): Colorimétrie

This book about colour continually invites your curiosity. The binding and printers' colour bars let you in to how a book is made. It is helpful that the author explains the complex, yet intriguing, process.

Ce livre sur la couleur éveille continuellement la curiosité. La reliure et les colorimètres d'imprimeur vous invitent à voir comment on fait un livre. L'explication de l'auteur sur le processus complexe, et à la fois fascinant, s'avère utile.

Honourable Mention | Mention honorable: The Mysterious Death of Tom Thomson

This designer is very attentive to production. He has created a huge number of wood engravings while remaining true to the craft.

Ce graphiste apporte le plus grand soin à l'exécution de son oeuvre. Bien qu'il ait créé un nombre extraordinaire de gravures sur bois, il a réussi à maintenir la qualité de la réalisation.

Honourable Mention | Mention honorable: PTTx Archive & Correspondance

The designer has made excellent use of a variety of media to create this very personal “archive” of his family history. The book’s structure indicates a lot of thinking and planning and the marginalia and folios are excellent.

Le graphiste fait un excellent usage de différents médias pour créer ces « archives » très personnelles de son histoire familiale. La structure du livre indique une réflexion préalable sérieuse et beaucoup de préparation. Les notes marginales et les folios sont remarquables.

Pictorial | Beaux livres

First Prize | Premier Prix: Kesu': the Art and Life of Doug Cranmer

The good cover interior draws us into a book filled with a superior combination of typography and illustration, where the design actually enhances the imagery. The consistent and understated text placement allows the images to be centre stage.

Les belles deuxième et troisième de couverture nous invitent à entrer dans un livre où l’association entre la typographie et l’illustration est exceptionnelle, où, en fait, le design met l’image en valeur. Le positionnement sobre et suivi du texte permet aux images d’être au premier plan.

Second Prize| Deuxième Prix: Fred Herzog Photographs

The text in this book is well set; the text block is inviting, with good proportions; and the line length is appropriate. Because the text was kept away from the photographs, it doesn’t impinge on the strength of the visuals.

Le texte dans ce livre est bien mis en page : grâce à ses proportions harmonieuses, le bloc de texte est attrayant et la longueur des lignes est appropriée. Comme il y a séparation entre les photographies et le texte, celui-ci n’atténue pas l’effet produit par les images.

Third Prize | Troisième Prix: Richard-Max Tremblay: Portrait

This book, about the artist Richard-Max Tremblay, opens in a cinematic fashion. The use of orange paper for navigation is interesting.

Ce livre, sur l’artiste Richard-Max Tremblay, est introduit par des images de style cinématographique. L’usage de papier orange, permettant une navigation aisée, est intéressant.

Honourable Mention | Mention honorable: Two Generals

This graphic novel is superior to all other graphic novels the judges have seen. The artist has made excellent, and subtle, use of colour, as well as a variety of grids, to tell the story of his grandfather, a World War II general.

Ce roman graphique est supérieur à tous ceux que les membres du jury ont eu l'occasion de voir. L'artiste a fait un excellent et subtil usage de la couleur, ainsi que de différentes grilles, pour raconter l'histoire de son grand-père, un général de la Seconde guerre Mondiale.

Poetry | Poésie

First Prize | Premier Prix: Curious Masonry: Three Translations from the Anglo-Saxon

Everything was considered in this exquisite and gorgeous book, from the great stamping on the cover to the beautifully carried out relationship of the spacing elements.

Tout a été pris en considération dans ce livre exquis et superbe, du magnifique estampage de la couverture jusqu'à la relation merveilleusement établie entre les éléments de l'interligne.

Second Prize | Deuxième Prix: Folk

The design elements were used well on the title page, and were incorporated, with restraint, throughout the book. The poem titles and the text are well balanced.

Les différents éléments du design ont été bien exploités sur la page de titre et ils ont été intégrés, avec retenue, tout au long du livre. Le titre des poèmes et le texte sont bien équilibrés.

Third Prize | Troisième Prix: Killdeer

The shape of the free-form poetry was clearly respected by the designer. The cover, a beautiful colour picture of a killdeer's wings, translates well from front and back.

La forme des poèmes en vers libres a été clairement respectée par le concepteur graphique. La très belle photo en couleurs des ailes d'un pluvier kildir, s'étale harmonieusement sur la première et la quatrième de couverture.

Honourable Mention | Mention honorable: Incitements

The use of black, and repeated elements, create great drama, and the title page is strong.

L'usage du noir et la répétition des éléments produisent un effet dramatique. La page de titre est forte.

Honourable Mention | Mention honorable: Wild Horses

There is good integration and position of the interior elements throughout this book.

Tout au long du livre, les éléments typographiques intérieurs sont bien placés et bien intégrés.

Prose fiction | Romans et nouvelles

First Prize | Premier Prix: The Man Who Killed

This noir novel has a wonderful geometric front and back cover. The title page design is brilliant and the interior has great margins and interesting outdented folios.

Ce roman noir affiche une première et une quatrième de couverture d'une merveilleuse géométrie. La conception de la page de titre est brillante et, à l'intérieur, les marges sont remarquables et les folios aux alinéas avancés sont intéressants.

Second Prize | Deuxième Prix: Natural Order

The use of spot varnish on the jacket is very clever, as it becomes part of the actual illustration. The title page, half-title page, spine, and cover stamping are all equally beautiful.

L'usage du vernis sélectif sur la jaquette est très astucieux parce qu'il finit par faire partie de l'illustration même. La page de titre, la page avec avant titre, le dos et l'estampage de la couverture sont tous aussi jolis les uns que les autres.

Third Prize (tie) | Troisième Prix (ex aequo): Various Positions

The title page sequence in this novel is very considered; everything is consistent. Letter spaced small caps are tasteful; the section breaks are clearly marked and unobtrusive; the leading is appropriate, and the page spreads are well formed.

La séquence dans la page de titre de ce roman est bien traitée ; tout se tient. Les petites capitales et leur interlettrage sont de bon goût, les sauts de section sont clairement marqués et discrets, l'interligne est approprié et les doubles pages sont bien formées.

Third Prize (tie) | Troisième Prix (ex aequo): Tubers

The concept of the book design is unified through the illustrations, chapter openers, and graphics used in this novel. This is a very readable book.

Dans ce roman, la conception graphique assure la cohésion entre les illustrations, les têtes de chapitre et les images. C'est un livre très facile à lire.

Honourable Mention | Mention honorable: À toi

This correspondence between two authors is too nice to be a trade book! It's a production feat to have a cover with 2 PMS colours and a die-cut. The colour printing on the inside cover is clever. The judges appreciated the colophon.

La correspondance entre les deux auteurs est trop belle pour apparaître dans une édition de grande consommation! La réalisation d'une couverture en deux couleurs de nuancier pantone avec, en plus, un découpage, relève d'un tour de force. L'impression en couleurs de la deuxième et de la troisième de couverture est astucieuse. Les membres du jury ont apprécié l'achevé d'imprimé.

Honourable Mention | Mention honorable: The Return

The judges liked the printed interior of the cover and the use of blurbs on the half title.

Les membres du jury ont aimé l'impression sur les rabats de la couverture et l'usage du texte de présentation sur la page d'avant titre.

Prose Non-fiction | Études et essais

First Prize | Premier Prix: Blast / Counterblast

This book uses design well to present the information – an examination of the way intellectuals interact. The secondary colour and highlights add excitement for the reader and demonstrate that everything has been considered and addressed.

Ce livre fait bon usage du design pour présenter l'information : un examen des rapports entre intellectuels. La couleur secondaire et le surlignage ajoutent au ravissement du lecteur et leur usage indique que tous les aspects ont été considérés et réglés.

Second Prize | Deuxième Prix: King: William Lyon Mackenzie King: a Life Guided by the Hand of Destiny

The design of this biography of Mackenzie King is very appropriate for its period and flows well. The cover – under its quite different jacket – is subtle and lovely. The chapter openers are tasteful and beautiful; there is a well-designed table of contents.

Le design de cette biographie de Mackenzie King est harmonieux et convient bien à l'époque. La couverture, sous une jaquette bien distincte, est subtile et ravissante. Les têtes de chapitre sont belles et de bon goût. La table des matières est bien conçue.

Third Prize | Troisième Prix: Sasquatch at Home: Traditional Protocols & Modern Storytelling

This book is an intimate look by Eden Robinson into the intricacies of family, culture, and place. The designer uses a rare ragged right setting of a good, strong text face. The use of white as a third colour on the chapter openings is clever.

Ce livre est le regard intime qu'Eden Robinson jette sur les complexités que présentent les relations familiales, la culture et la géographie. Le graphiste a choisi un alignement à droite inhabituel et une forte police de caractères. L'usage du blanc, comme troisième couleur dans les têtes de chapitre, est astucieux.

Honourable Mention | Mention honorable: The Shell of the Tortoise: Four Essays & an Assemblage

With its careful typesetting and high quality design and production, this investigation into the relationship between poetry and wilderness exemplifies the finer points and high aims of Gaspereau Press.

Grâce à la composition soignée et l'excellente qualité du design et de l'exécution, cette investigation de la relation entre la poésie et les espaces naturels est un exemple des aspirations les plus élevées de Gaspereau Press et des aspects les plus fins de sa production.

Prose Non-fiction Illustrated | Études et essais illustrés

First Prize | Premier Prix: Selling Canada: Three Propaganda Campaigns That Shaped the Nation

With its finely organized information and concise contents page, rhythm, and easiness around the well-integrated images, this beautifully illustrated work draws the reader in.

Cette œuvre, magnifiquement illustrée, engage le lecteur par son organisation minutieuse de l'information, sa table des matières concise, son rythme et ses images bien intégrées.

Second Prize | Deuxième Prix: Undesirables: White Canada and the Komagata Maru

This history of the Komagata Maru is packed with illustrations of the ship, and its passengers, that are well integrated with the text. The book is beautiful.

Ce livre sur l'histoire du Komagata Maru est rempli d'illustrations du navire et de ses passagers, toutes bien intégrées au texte. Le livre est superbe.

Third Prize | Troisième Prix: Prairie: a Natural History

All of the diagrams, maps, and the scaling of the photographs of the wide prairies are very well done. The wide margins allow for excellent marginalia.

Tous les schémas, les cartes et l'échelle des photographies des vastes Prairies canadiennes sont très bien réalisés. Les marges généreuses ont permis l'inclusion d'excellentes notes marginales.

Honourable Mention | Mention honorable: Vancouver Anthology

This illustrated collection of essays documenting a range of Vancouver cultural practices is understated, yet the tone works well for the subject matter.

Cette collection d'essais illustrés, qui documentent un éventail des pratiques culturelles de Vancouver, reste sobre tout en s'harmonisant bien avec le sujet.

Reference | Ouvrages de référence

First Prize | Premier Prix: Hoopla: the Art of Unexpected Embroidery

Hoopla showcases those who take the craft of embroidery where it's never gone before. The cover is fun and appropriate and the embroidered chapter covers are clever. Although the book is orderly, it isn't forced into a grid. It contains good referencing charts and a great thumbable index.

Hoopla met en valeur ceux qui poussent l'art de la broderie au-delà de ses limites. La couverture est amusante et seyante et les couvertures de chapitre brodées sont astucieuses. Bien que le livre soit ordonné, il n'est pas contraint par des grilles de mise en page. Il contient de bons tableaux de références et un excellent index facile à feuilleter.

Second Prize | Deuxième Prix: The Learn to Speak Series

The two books in this series, about music and dance, teach older children the basics of a broad artistic medium. They do so with great visual language and a good colour palette with no hint of process colours. These books have a lively vernacular feel; kudos for using illustration to its fullest.

Les deux livres de cette série sur la musique et la danse apprennent les bases d'un vaste champ artistique aux enfants plus âgés. Ils achèvent leur objectif en adoptant un merveilleux langage visuel et une bonne palette de couleurs sans un soupçon de tramage. Ces livres ont un aspect vivant et familier. Les membres du jury ont loué l'usage sans réserve des illustrations.

Third Prize | Troisième Prix: Republic of Doyle: the Definitive Guide to Doyle: Seasons One & Two

Republic of Doyle is a compendium to the first two seasons of the CBC TV series. A lot of thought went into making it look as the fans would want; much effort, and layers, in each spread, and a consistent look to the fanbook style.

Republic of Doyle est un abrégé des deux premières saisons de la série de télévision de la CBC. Ce livre est le fruit de sérieuses réflexions qui ont abouti à produire l'apparence désirée par ses fans, c'est-à-dire, beaucoup de couches dans chaque double page et le look constant du fanbook.

Dr. Yosef Wosk and the Wosk family have generously assisted the Alcuin Society to expand the importance of the Alcuin awards for book design. With their financial help we have been able to improve the awards catalogue, bring judges from outside British Columbia, exhibit the awarded books throughout Canada and Europe, and make other enhancements to the programme. As well as helping us financially over a decade, Dr. Wosk has, with enthusiasm, wisdom, and specific advice, helped us to increase the awards from the relatively modest undertaking they once were to the internationally recognized national competition they are today. We are grateful to Dr. Wosk and his family for their continued support.

Yosef Wosk et sa famille nous ont beaucoup aidés à accroître l'importance du concours Alcuin pour la conception graphique du livre. Leur générosité nous a permis d'améliorer le catalogue des ouvrages primés, de faire venir des membres du jury de l'extérieur de la Colombie-Britannique, d'exposer les livres gagnants dans tout le Canada et en Europe et de continuer à développer notre programme. Il y a une dizaine d'années que Monsieur Wosk nous soutient financièrement. De plus, il a contribué à l'expansion de notre entreprise par son enthousiasme, sa sagesse et ses conseils clairs et précis. Le concours de la Société Alcuin, dont la portée était au départ assez modeste, est aujourd'hui reconnu sur le plan national et international grâce à lui. Nous sommes reconnaissants à Monsieur Wosk et à sa famille de leur appui continu.

The Alcuin Society was formed in Vancouver in 1965. It was the idea of its founder, Geoffrey Spencer, and other founding members were Basil Stuart-Stubbs, C.M., Bill Duthie, Sam Black, Bill McConnell, Dale Smith and Sam Fogel. The initial aim of the Society was to promote a wider appreciation of fine books among book lovers around the world. It is the only non profit organization in Canada dedicated to the entire range of interests related to books and reading. Through Amphora, the Society's quarterly journal, topics covered include authorship, publishing, book design and production, the history of the book, libraries, ephemera, bookselling, book buying and collecting and the book arts of typography, type design, printing, binding, papermaking, marbling, calligraphy and illustration.

The name "Alcuin" honours the memory of Alcuin of York (c. 735 to 804 A.D.), Abbot of St. Martin at Tours, a man who cared deeply about books and literacy. As Charlemagne's "Minister of Culture", and a respected teacher, Alcuin encouraged the study and preservation of ancient texts, and helped establish numerous schools and libraries and contributed to the development of the lowercase alphabet.

To further its aims, the Alcuin Society engages in a wide range of educational activities – lectures, workshops, exhibitions, field visits, many in collaboration with educational institutions such as the Canadian Centre for Studies in Publishing at Simon Fraser University, University of British Columbia, the Emily Carr University of Art + Design and the University of Victoria. The Alcuin Society Annual Awards for Excellence in Book Design in Canada is the only national competition of its kind that recognizes and celebrates the art of book design in Canada. Winners of this award represent Canada at the international exhibits and competition at the Frankfurt and Leipzig Book Fairs held annually in Germany. The Society offers the Robert R. Reid Award and Medal to recognise lifetime achievement in, or extraordinary contributions to the Book Arts in Canada.

La Société Alcuin a été formée à Vancouver en 1965. Au départ, l'idée a été conçue par Geoffrey Spencer, qui, avec Basil Stuart-Stubbs (C.M.), Bill Duthie, Sam Black, Bill McConnell, Dale Smith et Sam Fogel, a été un des membres fondateurs de la Société. Le but initial de la Société était de favoriser l'appréciation du livre de qualité parmi les bibliophiles du monde entier. C'est le seul organisme à but non lucratif au Canada, qui soit dédié à tout ce qui touche le livre et la lecture. Amphora, la revue trimestrielle de la Société, offre à ses lecteurs des articles divers sur la profession d'auteur, la publication, la conception et la production graphiques, l'histoire du livre et de l'imprimé, les bibliothèques, l'éphémère, la vente, l'achat et la collection des livres, la typographie, le design de caractères typographiques, l'impression, la reliure, la fabrication et la marbrure du papier, la calligraphie et l'illustration.

Le nom « Alcuin » fait honneur à la mémoire de Alcuin d'York (vers 735 à 804 apr. J. C.), abbé de Saint-Martin de Tours, un homme qui s'intéressait profondément à la diffusion des livres et reconnaissait l'importance de savoir lire. Comme « ministre de la culture » de Charlemagne et professeur respecté, Alcuin a favorisé l'étude et la préservation des textes anciens, a rendu possible l'établissement de nombreuses écoles et bibliothèques dans le royaume et a contribué au développement des lettres minuscules de l'alphabet.

Pour promouvoir ses objectifs, la Société entreprend un nombre considérable de projets pédagogiques, tels que des conférences, des ateliers, des expositions, des concours, dont plusieurs en collaboration avec le Canadian Centre for Studies in Publishing de l'université Simon Fraser, l'université de la Colombie-Britannique, l'université d'art et de design Emily Carr et l'université de Victoria. Le concours annuel des prix pour l'excellence de la conception graphique au Canada de la Société Alcuin est le seul concours national de son genre qui reconnaîsse et fasse honneur à la conception graphique au Canada. Les lauréats de ce concours représentent le pays lors des expositions et concours internationaux à la foire annuelle du livre à Francfort et à Leipzig. La Société décerne le Prix et la Médaille Robert R. Reid qui récompense l'ensemble des réalisations ou les contributions remarquables d'un individu dans le monde du livre au Canada.
