Editor's Remarks

By Sandra Wong.

It is with great relief to have had so much positive feedback on the new online incarnation of your BCLA newsletter.   We appreciate all your kind remarks.

The Editorial Team of the BCLA Browser strongly encourages all members to make a contribution.

Let your BCLA colleagues know what you or your library organization is up to.

- Are you piloting a new service?
- Implementing a new system?
- Using a social networking tool in your library that's having an impact?
- Tell us about interesting workshops, conferences that you've attended and what you learned?

- Since the Browser is only publishing 4 times per year, please avoid sending time-sensitive announcements and upcoming events.

Submitting to the BCLA Browser

By going with Open Journal Systems, BCLA is able to streamline the publishing operation of a volunteer run publication.

Authors simply need to register with the journal website in order to submit items for publication in the Browser. Once logged in, authors complete a five-step submission process.   Detailed instructions for authors are available to guide you through the system.

Using the word template created by our graphic designer helps alleviate the significant time required by the editors to layout and copyedit numerous submissions simultaneously in advance of the publication date.

Deadlines for submissions

- January 10th for February 1 publication.
- March 10th for April 1 publication date.
- June 10th for July 1 publication date [Conference Reports Edition].
- October 10th for November 1 publication date.

Annual conference reports

Issue no. 3 will be published on July 1 and will regularly feature reports from the annual conference. If you are attending, please consider sending in a summary of your experience at the conference and/or a summary of a session that you found most interesting and rewarding.

Sandra Wong is a science liaison librarian at Simon Fraser University.